WEST VIRGINIA BRIEFS

HUNTINGTON: The American Car and Foundry plant here has received the biggest individual order it has landed in several years. The order is for 1,200 cars from the Cuba railroad. Three hundred and fifty will be flat cars, 350 box cars and 500 cane cars.

YHEELING: "Green and red wings will be conspicuous this summer by their absence," says J. C. Williams, general manager of a tent and awning company here. The prices have doubled in the last four months in these colors, due to the war.

KEYSER: County officers raided a Western Maryland passenger train and arrested a woman and two little girls under whose dresses in specially made belts were found, according to the officers, sixty-five pints of alcohol, purchased across the state line. All were jailed for trials under charges of violating the prohibition law.

MARTINSBURG: When their automobile crashed into the side of a moving freight train near Roy, Grove, Guy Kitchen, Edgar L. Henshaw, John Jones, Walter Thatcher and Rumsey Graham, all of this city, were hurled to the ground and injured. Grove, Kitchen and Henshaw seriously.

GRAFTON: Jesse H. Bartlett, 65, of Simpson, died here of injuries received when he was struck by an eastbound Baltimore and Ohio passenger train at Brydon. He was returning from his work as a watchman for the railroad when struck.

PARKERSBURG: City council has directed the city clerk to advertise for bids for the paving of twenty streets, preliminary steps thereto having been taken in the passage of ordinances.

SISTERSVILLE: Okey J. Smith, 55, well known printer and publisher, is dead at his home here after a lingering illness of Bright's disease.

WHEELING: Harry Weiss, labor member of the legislature from Ohio county in 1915, is the first to aspire for a seat in the next House in the press, the long-rolling thunder of the freight, the roundhouse and the shop which would make railroad men firm in the fraternal spirit even if they had not their brotherhoods; and this fraternal spirit extends to the men in the lone towers at the telegraph key, with their hands on a spark that guides for safety over switch and frog—and in this very vigil over life and death on the rail, William F. Hite took up the toll to manhood.

Today he is rated as a man with means, not so rich as many believe, perhaps, but his life has not been one of luxury and ease, and all he has gleaned along the stony path of hard work and earnest endeavor. Every American admires success in any citizen and when this comes a brother of the man at the switch and telegraph key and throttle, in the person of the former telegraph operator and freight superintendent, now the candidate for the United States Senate in West Virginia, railroaders are not slow to see in him an ideal developed out of the fiber of their own lives.

Jack Nightingale, commissioner of labor, in his report for 1914, gives the number of railroad trainmen in West Virginia as 4,500; locomotive firemen and engineers, 2,400; locomotive engineers, 2,300; railroad telegraphers, 500; railway carmen, 1,080; railroad conductors, 2,100—a total of about 13,000 railroad workers in the state, and a great proportion of them are native West Virginians and nearly all of them are voters.

Hite, the candidate for the United States Senate, is not personally so well acquainted in the northern end of the state as he will be by June 6, the day of the primaries, but Hite, the star on the West Virginia University football team, is known to every university alumnus and every young man with the red-blood love of clean athletics in his veins from one end of the state to the other. The popular football half-back is the candidate's nephew, and "Uncle Bill" had garnered basketsful of votes among the young men of the state the moment his candidacy was announced. "If Uncle Bill can buck the line anything like that lad at the 'Varsity,'" say the Varsity rooters, in every county, "he's going through for a touch-down and a goal."

Then, too, in addition to these bids for popularity among the people, reaching, it will be noticed, to important branches of industry and education, the candidate's name permeates like the network of the old Indian trails that have become the highways of the state today, every year of West Virginia's history dating back to the first expeditions of those hearty pioneers who crossed the mountains into the frontier to the West. Without attempting to trace the descent of the name, perusal of the state's history shows Jacob Hite breaking wilderness on the Potomac in 1727, and Joist Hite leading a colony of fifteen families from York, Pa., into the eastern panhandle in 1732. The family name is now well known in both North and South of the state. The Huntington candidate for the Senate was well along in his railroad and industrial career when ex-Governor White moved into the state and continued his newspaper talent in the rapid development of the Parkersburg newspaper, which he purchased; the two men early became acquainted in a friendship which has never been broken, and which in the present guarantees clean and honorable methods of canvass which bids fair to be one of the satisfying features of the campaign.

How to get rid of chronic dandruff. The only sure way to get permanent rid of dandruff is to remove the conditions that cause it and then keep the hair and scalp in a clean healthy, vigorous state so dandruff will never return. This beats cham-poons, which merely remove the dandruff for a few days at most. Well's-Haymaker Company are now strongly recommending Parisian Sage, a harmless, inexpensive and quick acting preparation, that is guaranteed to act directly on the cause of dandruff and entirely remove it or the purchase will be cheerfully refunded.

Here is a test no one should fail to try. Get from your druggist a package of Parisian Sage. Rub a little of it into the scalp with the finger tips and see for yourself how the dandruff disappears, the hair stops falling out and all itching immediately ceases. Nothing hurts the hair more than dandruff, so why not get rid of it? Parisian Sage today and be forever rid of it?—Advertisement.

SON STEP INTO
NERV-WORTH LIST

With Better Health Came a Gain of Six Pounds.

Mr. Barker lives at 224 Milford street, Stealey Heights, this city. His words, which follow, will attract widespread attention: "I have had kidney and bladder trouble for 30 years and rheumatism stomach trouble. My food did me no good. "I purchased a bottle of Nerv-Worth and I and my son used it and I gained six pounds. "I am feeling much improved. Can recommend Nerv-Worth to be a great remedy. It has helped my son and I am wonderfully improved. "WILLIAM BARKER. Your dollar back at Burke's drug store if Nerv-Worth fails to benefit you.—Advertisement.

CHARLESTON: Adjutant General Bond has mailed a circular letter to every state militia command, asking for a volunteer to take up the study of aviation. One man from the West Virginia national guard will be given sixty days in which to study this branch of the service under the direction of a western airplane concern.

ST. ALBANS: W. S. Rekerts, of Marietta, O., was literally blown to pieces by an explosion of nitroglycerine. He was carrying two cans of explosive under his arms when his foot slipped and he fell. The report of the explosion was heard in Charleston, twelve miles distant. The explosive had been hauled to St. Albans from Marietta in a wagon and was being transferred to a boat in the Kanawha river. No one was within a quarter of a mile of the victim when the explosion occurred, so far as anyone knows.

WHEELING: When does elder in its hard stage cease to be hard elder and become elder vinegar, is the question that is puzzling local prohibition officers, and a specialist in liquors may be called before the next grand jury to decide the issue. In a recent raid upon a restaurant officials seized several barrels of liquor, which they contend is hard elder, being sold in violation of the Yost law. The owner contends it is elder vinegar.

CHARLESTON: Only six out of 223 pupils of the eighth grade in Taylor county passed the examination recently under the direction of the department of schools. In Ohio county 150 pupils took the test and not a single one of them made a grade sufficient to allow the issuance of a certificate. In Brooke county the showing was good, for twenty-one out of sixty-one pupils passed the examination and were issued certificates. In Putnam county sixty out of eighty-five pupils successfully took the test.

STUDY CLASS
IS ORGANIZED IN PITTSBURG

By the Employees of Freight Traffic Department of the Baltimore and Ohio.

BALTIMORE, Feb. 17.—In order to equip themselves for promotions and positions of greater responsibility in railroad service, the employees of the Baltimore and Ohio railroad's freight traffic department at Pittsburgh have organized a study class for the study of matter pertaining to their work and that of other departments.

C. S. Roberts, chief clerk of the department, has been placed in charge of the course of instruction. He will be assisted by Archibald Fries, general freight agent; T. J. Walters, division freight agent; and J. C. Kimes, commercial freight agent, who in addition to consenting to discuss various phases of traffic solicitation have enrolled for the course.

The prescribed course will require eighteen months. The basis of ratemaking, tariffs, differentials, interline participation in through rates, embargoes, per diem regulations, solicitation of traffic and industrial development are among the subjects relating to traffic which will be studied. As the work of the class progresses, it is likely that the curriculum will be enlarged.

LORIMER

financier and one of the Republican dictators of Illinois. Charles B. Munday, said to have been the directing influence in the Lorimer-Munday string of banks, was found guilty of conspiracy November 13, 1915, after trial at Morris, Ill., the case having been transferred from Cook county on a charge of venue on petition of Munday.

William Lorimer's rapid rise from a Chicago newsboy to a seat in the United States Senate and his fall when his seat was declared vacant on the ground that his election had been procured by fraud and bribery, form an interesting chapter in the political history of Illinois. Nearly a year after Lorimer's election to the Senate,

A Fine Aid For Mother-to-be

We are all greatly indebted to those who tell their experiences. And among the many things which we read about and are of immediate importance to the expectant mother, is a splendid external remedy called "Mother's Friend." This is applied over the muscles of the stomach. It is deeply penetrating in its influence. Mothers everywhere tell of its soothing effect, how it allays pains incident to stretching of cords, ligaments and muscles. They tell of restful comfort of calm, peaceful nights, an absence of those distresses peculiar to the period of expectancy, relief from morning sickness, no more of that apprehension with which so many young women's minds become burdened. It is a splendid help. Get a bottle of "Mother's Friend" from your nearest druggist. Ask your husband to get it for you. Then write to Bradfield Regulator Co., 705 Lamar Bldg., Atlanta, Ga., for a very handsome and instructive book. It is filled with suggestive ideas of great help to all women interested in the subject of maternity. And best of all are some letters from mothers that are real inspirations. Write today.

We can go back half a century for letters from women who used "Mother's Friend." And it was this sort of recommendation that extended its use today. It is sold in almost every drug store in the United States. It is considered a standard remedy and one of the most efficient helps known. Directions for using are very easily complied with and it may be used at any time whenever needed.

Charles A. White, a member of the legislature, who had voted for Lorimer, made a written confession under oath that he had received a bribe for his vote and that a "jack pot" corruption fund had been used in the session to influence legislation.

Lorimer was born in Manchester, England, in 1851, the son of a Presbyterian minister, who emigrated with his family to this country and settled in Chicago when young Lorimer was nine years old. He sold newspapers on the streets of Chicago, drove a laundry wagon and became a street car driver before entered politics. He served twelve years in Congress before he was elected a United States senator, May 26, 1909.

Munday was a messenger boy and then became a telegraph operator in his home town of Litchfield, Ill. Later he became a clerk in the grain business, and in 1910 came to Chicago and induced Lorimer to enter a bank with him. May 10, 1910, the La Salle Street National Bank opened its doors with William Lorimer, president, and Charles B. Munday vice president. The institution was denied full admission to the Chicago Clearing House and for a time operated by clearing through another bank.

October 22, 1912, the La Salle Street National Bank was converted into the La Salle Street Trust and Savings Bank, a state institution. The state bank assumed all liabilities and assets of the National, keeping the same capital, $1,000,000, and the same surplus, $250,000. In the course of the next year, half a dozen smaller neighborhood banks were organized in Chicago by Lorimer and Munday and became known as subsidiaries of the La Salle Street Trust and Savings Bank. In addition to these, Munday was interested in several down state banks which had business dealing with the La Salle Street Trust and Savings Bank.

June 12, 1914, Daniel V. Harkin, state bank examiner, appeared at the La Salle Street Trust and Savings Bank two hours before the regular time for opening. Reports that the parent institution was insolvent had led to a serious run on the bank by depositors. Harkin, after a brief examination of the bank's affairs closed the institution. Within a few weeks all the subsidiary banks closed. The Munday down state banks later felt the effect of the collapse of the La Salle Street Trust and Savings Bank. Receivers also were named for several of the subsidiary banks. Meanwhile the United States district attorney and the state's attorney of Cook county had begun an investigation of the bank's affairs. Numerous business enterprises of William Lorimer and Charles B. Munday followed the bank into insolvency.

Investigation showed that the greater proportion of the La Salle Street Trust and Savings Bank assets was made up of loans to enterprises in which Lorimer, Munday and Harry W. Huttig were interested. As a result of these investigations indictments were returned against Lorimer, Munday, Huttig and others by both federal and state grand juries. The federal indictments were rushed through in the summer of 1914 in order to get within the statute of limitations, for these charges were based on the operation of the bank prior to its conversion into a state institution, October 22, 1914.

The bulk of the state indictments were returned by the Cook county grand jury October 21, 1912. These were against Lorimer, Munday, Huttig and other officers and employees of the bank and former officials of the state auditor's office.

It was charged that assets of the La Salle Street Trust and Savings Bank had been used to organize the subsidiary banks, that checks had been "kited" in carrying out the plan and that the parent bank had been insolvent for some time prior to the collapse.

State's Attorney Hoyne planned to try all the defendants together. The defendants opposed this and entered motions for separate trials. When these were overruled by the courts, Munday asked for a change of venue on the grounds of prejudice and the case was sent to Morris, Grundy county, for trial.

The Lorimer-Huttig case was expected to go to trial early in January, 1916, and State's Attorney Hoyne planned to have one trial for all the defendants.
